Professor Joshua Lederberg
Madison, Wisc., USA

Dear Joshua:

Please consider the enclosed official invitation to the International Congress of Microbiology. I have been authorized to add that "although the final budget of the congress has not yet been drawn up, we expect to be able to give a substantial support towards covering travel and per diem expenses." In your case I can personally assure you that we shall be able to cover all your expenses; if the Congress will not provide all, our institute will add the rest.

I have been also asked to add to the invitation the following: "If you accept the function I hope that you will actively participate in organizing the symposium as we both will be referred to as organizers when the symposium is printed." Finally I have to ask you that "if your answering letter is sent directly to the secretary general please enclose an extra copy which he can forward to me".

I expect to arrive to Madison June 25th via Northwestern flight 525 from New York. Please don't make any trouble for yourself if you are busy and don't wait at the airport; just leave a note where I should proceed.

Looking forward to see you soon and with best regards,

George Klein
